

Interleaving vs. Blocking

This diagram compares timelines for blocking and interleaving.

In the blocking timeline, there are three large blocks to represent study sessions, each focused on a different topic (topics A, B, and C). There is a small gap of time between each block of studying.

In the interleaving timeline, each large block or study session has been broken into three smaller ones. In the first study session, topics A, B, and C are reviewed in that order. In the second session, the topics are reviewed in the order B, C, A. In the third session, the topics are reviewed in the order C, A, B.
